

Dialogue

R: Hi Frank. How are you?

F: Fain, thanks. What about you?

R: I'm little worried about your idea to go to the newspaper with the information about our company.

F: Yeah, you are right. I think that people should know about these machination.

R: Wait Frank! I'm sure we could reach agreement on this.

F: Which agreement do you mean?

R: I've bend over backwards to build this company and I will not have you a drag its name through the mud. How much money do you want?

F: Randy, it's not about the money.

R: Frank! Don't push me too far or I might lose my temper! How much do you want? 1, 2, 5 million dollars?

F: Don't reach for the stars too early with your bid amount.

R: It seems we are pulled in two different directions. Would you like to be my partner?

F: I bow to you judgment. I'll agree to the deal.

R: Good. See you tomorrow.

F: Bye!
